FOREWORD AND INSTRUCTIONS

The LODOMO series of Toy Building Bricks has been developed from the well known Lott's Bricks. Simplicity has always been one of the features of this toy, and that such realistic results can be obtained with so small a number of differently shaped bricks has surely contributed to their continued popularity.

Without losing anything of this simplicity LODOMO provides boys and girls with a means of constructing all manner of miniature buildings, which are as complete in their resemblance to the real thing as they are charming to the eye.

Few instructions need be given to the beginner, as the plans and illustrations are almost self-explanatory.

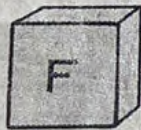

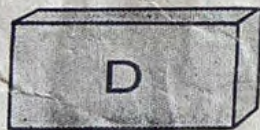

Firstly you should acquaint yourself with the letters which are assigned to the various bricks. The numbers which follow the letters in the ground plans indicate where brick work faces or doors are to show outside the model. When commencing to build, be sure to lay out first the bricks shown in the ground plan. The building of the model can then be completed by referring to the illustration.

With most of the models, the sides and ends not seen in the illustrations are the same as those which are visible.

Where this is not so, sufficient bricks will always be found to make these up according to your own ideas.

The diagram of bricks illustrated relates to the complete Lodomo series, and are not all enclosed in this Box.
